UNDERSTANDING

There are many factors that contribute to success, all of which are important, and most of which get their full share of acknowledgments. There is one factor, however, which is frequently overlooked yet is just as significant as any of the others; and that is understanding.

Working hard and doing that which is set out for us to do will produce; but an excellent job, one that truly rates the banner of success is only approached, but never reached without understanding.

For example, we can take any given effort wherein a lot of money and hard work are spent yet the end result turns out to be a total failure. The reason? Perhaps it was because the individuals involved did not understand what they were attempting. Sometimes the leaders of certain efforts intentionally keep the people ignorant of basic knowledge because a complete understanding would strip all interest from the job. Under these circumstances the task is doomed to failure before it begins; and the reason is the lack of understanding.

So if individually or collectively we want to improve our batting average, a very good rule to follow is to make a point of understanding what we set out to do, before we start. The combination of diligence, skill and understanding makes for a difficult team to beat.

WHAT'S IN A WORD

The language that we use every day has come to be taken for granted, yet there is good and sufficient reason to know that words can play some pretty hellacious tricks on us. As a matter of fact, a small group of people have developed a profession around this fact and literally sell words.

One of the most dramatic examples of this just recently came to our attention. It is the story of a salmon cannery that received a large shipment of white salmon. They processed and canned the product as usual, but just could not sell it for love nor money. There just was no market for white salmon.

They had a problem and did something about it: they hired one of these word specialists. Within a few days, and for a big fee, the specialist came up with a sticker to be added to the label, that read—"The only salmon guaranteed not to turn pink in the can".

As you have guessed, the product was an immediate success, and they could not get enough to fill the demand. Of course, no salmon turns pink in the can, and the slogan said nothing to the contrary. The clever use of words gave a false impression and because the public takes words so much for granted, the results were as we noted.

An observation we can all do well to heed is to remember that experts make a living by using and abusing simple words. Let us not take words for granted. With a little thought and common sense we can avoid the unnecessary headaches. The next time we hear something that is out of the ordinary, let's make sure we understand the subject and not be fooled by the words that are used to tell the tale.

Hixburg

Hixburg, June 20.- On Saturday while John Hix was working on his combine, his son, Tommy, 2½ years old, climbed up onto the machine, and somehow his left thumb was cut off below the second joint.

His parents rushed him to an Appomattox doctor who sent them to a surgeon at Lynchburg General Hospital. There they were told that the finger could not be saved.

After a long day in the hospital, they brought the little fellow home. He is playing around in the yard, and seems all right otherwise.

No one knows what started the fire at John Goin's on Saturday afternoon. Kenneth Goin was putting gas into the tractor when the blaze began. The tires and part of the shed was burned. The Goins appreciate the quick arrival of the fire engines from Pamplin and Appomattox and the firemen.

REP. ABBITT EXPLAINS NEW TOBACCO BILL

Representative Watkins M. Abbitt, Chairman of the Tobacco Subcommittee of the House Agriculture Committee, announced today that a hearing is being held June 22 on a bill to authorize tobacco producers who do not wish to use their acreage allotment to lease such allotment for a year at a time to other farmers.

The bill (H. R. 1022) was introduced by Representative D. R. Matthews of Florida. It would permit the leasing of tobacco acreage only within the county where the allotment is located and would be adjusted to conform to the relative productivity of the two farms involved. The bill also provides that a farmer could not lease out his tobacco allotment for more than four years in succession without losing his status as an "old farm" and thus losing the allotment after the fifth year.
